Gentlemen:-

Under separate cover I am mailing you a wax impression of eleven coins owned by a client of this office. This impression was made to avoid loss of the coins in transit the originals will be sent you if you wish to see them.

Will you kindly advise me if these coins have a value and if so a general idea of the amount for which they could be sold.

Sincerely yours,

Paul S. Stansbury

Dear Sir:

The coins of which you sent wax impression are German bracteates of about the fourteenth century. None of the ones you have I would say were rare and they are in very little demand. You might get about $4.00 from some dealer for the whole lot. I much doubt if you would get any more. We have all but one or two of them. If you cannot do any better we would give you $4.00 for them.

Very truly yours,
